

Is it really the job of the FCC to control who can provide services? Or is that supposed to be the public's job by using the products they want? Seems to me that XM is providing the product and the FM stations are trying to claim it is their ball and they want it back. XM provides a product and it is something that many people want. Please don't bow to big money.